Senior Recruitment Coup for Woods Bagot

International architectural practice, Woods Bagot, today announced a significant appointment for its London office as James Berry joined its team as Director of Public, Transportation & Institutional.

The appointment will spearhead the firm's expansion into the transport sector in Europe as well as support for its successful global education and science practice.

Ross Donaldson, Group Managing Director of Woods Bagot, said: "Woods Bagot's offices around the globe already work on significant projects in the Middle East, Asia and Australasia. James' expertise in the design and management of major, complex projects is drawn from more than 25 years experience and will greatly enhance our offering both in Europe and our global offices."

James Berry's previous experience includes roles as Global Board Director at HOK Inc., and Skanska plc. and multi-billion projects at London Heathrow Terminal 5 and Crossrail. He has also worked on the delivery of high quality PFI projects in both education and health sectors.

Ross Donaldson said: "James has a proven track record in the efficient design and delivery of excellent, sustainable buildings that really meet the needs of stakeholders. He has achieved this through strong design leadership, a deep understanding of the technology and logistics of construction and integrated thinking across the supply chain."
